

Dear Friends of The Davies Project,

The Davies Project is entering an exciting new chapter as preparations begin for a pilot launch in Kalamazoo County. After years of serving families in the Lansing area with reliable, compassionate transportation to essential medical appointments, the organization is now laying the groundwork to expand its reach. This pilot will help determine how best to support Kalamazoo County families, build partnerships with local healthcare providers, and identify the unique needs of the community. It's a thoughtful, deliberate step—one rooted in the belief that every child deserves access to care, no matter the barriers standing in the way.

This moment also arrives at a time when many of our neighbors are facing extraordinary challenges. Economic strain, health concerns, and the lingering effects of uncertainty have left countless families feeling stretched thin. In times like these, offering support isn't just an act of service; it becomes a source of healing for everyone involved. There's something profoundly grounding about showing up for one another, especially when the world feels heavy. Helping a parent get their child to treatment or easing the burden of transportation can be a small but powerful reminder that community still matters.

As The Davies Project prepares for this new pilot, the work ahead is fueled by both purpose and hope. Expanding into Kalamazoo County is more than a logistical milestone—it's a commitment to strengthening the fabric of care across Michigan. And as volunteers, partners, and supporters come together, they're reminded that compassion has a ripple effect. When we lift up families who are struggling, we also lift ourselves, creating a community where resilience grows and kindness becomes a shared resource.

Thanks for being a part of this wonderful work.

Sincerely,
Pam
